GENERAL REMARKS.

Thomas Carlyle has said: "All that a university, or final highest school can do for us, is still but what the first school began doing—teach us to read. The true university of these days is a collection of books." We have a collection of books, and doubtless the work of a university is being done by them on a small scale. Where one reads with a purpose there is an opportunity with the aid of even a small library to become a man or woman of culture. Another author of repute has said that "every book we take up without a purpose is an opportunity lost of taking up a book with a purpose—every bit of stray information which we cram into our heads without any sense of its importance, is for the most part a bit of most useful information driven out of our heads and choked off from our minds." Books that furnish entertainment are in greatest demand here as everywhere and the majority of our books are of this character. The most useful books, however, are those that cause us to think for ourselves and of these we have a moderate supply. During the year past there has been a gain over the preceding year of three per cent. in the reading of non-fiction. We trust that the coming year will see a still greater demand for solid reading. Prof. John Stuart Blackie gave as a result of experience this rule to young men: "Avoid miscellaneous reading. Read nothing that you do not care to remember; and remember nothing that you do not mean to use." The best books to read are those that will bear reading more than once, and a book that will not bear this test is hardly worth reading at all.

A glance at the Librarian's report will show that the library continues to be appreciated, and many a farm fireside is made brighter by the reading of books furnished cheerfully to all who apply for them. It has been said that the place where literature is appreciated is in the country home. The long winter evening quickly passes when one is absorbed in a good book; and, best of all, solid strength is being laid up by the assimilation of what is excellent in literature.

The hills of Vermont and New Hampshire have sheltered many a youth until the maturing of his powers and then sent him forth to serve his fellow men, and to be influential in shaping the life and policy of the nation. When Daniel Webster was asked to account for the "Great Stone Face" at Franconia, he replied: "You merchants of the city display signs outside your doors to indicate what goods you make there; the Almighty has placed his sign on that cliff to indicate that he makes men here." Anything which contributes to the making of solid, substantial men should have the hearty support of all citizens, and the free public library which now has been established in almost every country town is a factor in the upbuilding of the best type of manhood.

This report should not close without some mention of the gift of twenty-five dollars by Mrs. Clara J. Marden. This was a kindness which will not quickly be forgotten. Another addition to the treasury of something over twenty dollars resulted from an entertainment given by friends of the library. Thanks also are due to all who have presented books or periodicals. A larger number of patrons than usual have in this way manifested their interest in the general welfare.

SCHOOL REPORT.

The schools have been in session during the past year thirty-one weeks. This makes the longest school year of the town's history, although twice during recent years the schools have been in session thirty weeks. This result has not been brought about by reducing the salary of teachers. The aim has been to secure good teachers. New teachers have been required to pass an examination furnished by the State Superintendent, covering the studies taught in our common schools. This has proved to be an advantage. The calling of a teacher is one of the highest, and no one should think of entering it without thorough preparation. It is to be regretted that so many regard the position as a convenient way of earning some pocket money and care little about their equipment for work. The teachers employed have been above the average, and those who left town at the close of the summer term are filling more lucrative situations elsewhere.

At the last school meeting the district voted to raise a larger sum than usual in addition to what the law requires, and this has enabled the School Board to make better terms with teachers and to secure on the whole a higher grade of service than we have had in recent years. The progress in some of the schools can be readily observed. It is true of educational work as of everything else ; to secure good service one must pay good wages. For this reason we hope the district will be as generous in its appropriation this year as it was last.

One thing to which more attention should be given is the matter of punctuality. It should be borne in mind that the reading of the Testament at the opening of the school is a school exercise. Pupils coming into school during or after this exercise cannot expect to be marked perfect in attendance.

On this point teachers need to be particular, and to insist that the children be in their places when school begins. The habit of straggling into the school room anytime within fifteen minutes after the session has begun is against good discipline. In these days when almost everything is supposed to run on schedule time it is important that the habit of punctuality should be formed early. Aside from this it would seem that the time regulations of a public school are worthy of as much respect as those of a steamboat or railroad. If parents will do their part in helping the teacher, we think the record for perfect attendance can be improved during the coming year. It cannot be considered a hardship to require that the pupils shall be in the school-room by nine o'clock in the morning, and those who are there in season ought not to be interrupted by late comers.

We desire to thank the parents for the interest they have taken in the schools during the year. This helps the teacher and encourages the pupils. Parents who take the trouble to visit the school which their children attend can see what is being done for them, and can appreciate the faithful efforts of the teacher to bring out and develop the best that is in them. In this way parents learn to sympathize with the teacher, and where parents and teacher work together the school fulfils its aim.
